Grades
- 1 through 6

Evidence-Based Practice
- Explicitly teaching and reinforcing inference-making leads to better outcomes in overall text comprehension, text engagement, and metacognitive thinking (Borné et al., 2005).
- Students should cite the evidence they used to draw conclusions in order to make the implicit process [of making inferences] more explicit (Borné et al., 2005).
- Students are expected to make inferences in authentic reading situations as well as on high-stakes standardized tests (McMackin et al., 2001).
- Standardized tests require students to predict, draw conclusions, elaborate, explain, and make analogies (McMackin et al., 2001).

Additionally, Calkins (2001) suggested that by teaching children to interpret [via making inferences], we teach them how to seek meaning in what they read and how to make meaning in their lives.

No-Glamour Inferences incorporates these principles and is also based on expert professional practice.
About the Author

Lauren Kanefsky M.S., CCC-SLP, received her bachelor’s degree from George Washington University in 2001 and her master’s degree in Speech-Language Pathology from Teacher’s College–Columbia University, New York, in 2003. Lauren has spent the last five years working as a speech-language pathologist, providing clinical services in the public schools and in private practice. She is also involved in providing early intervention services for children under the age of three years.

Lauren currently resides in New Jersey with her husband, Matthew, and her son, Jonah. She enjoys traveling, reading, and spending time with her friends and family. No-Glamour Inferences is Lauren’s second publication with LinguiSystems. She is also the author of Inference Card Games.

Dedication

This book is dedicated to the two most important men in my life, my loving and supportive husband Matthew, and the most wonderful new addition to my family, my beautiful son Jonah.

Introduction

Inference is a fundamental process that envelopes much of our thinking. During our daily lives, we use inference to imply meaning, to guess, to suggest, or to suppose. Making inferences involves looking beyond what is explicitly stated in a picture, text, or message, and filling in the missing information.

The primary goal of No-Glamour Inferences is to help students improve their inference-making skills (predicting, problem solving, drawing conclusions) from the acquisition of knowledge through the evaluation of that knowledge.

In order to make an inference, a student must:

- Recognize and understand the available information.
- Find patterns and similarities within prior knowledge and experience.
- Use appropriate language and vocabulary skills to explain the inference.
- Use input from others to verify that the inference was correct (Bowers et al., 2005).

The ability to make inferences is an essential academic skill. Students who can’t make logical inferences have difficulty answering math story problems, predicting information needed to comprehend text, and taking others’ perspectives while reading. These students also have difficulty building peer relationships if they cannot interpret emotions, behavior, and social situations.

Administer the Pre/Post Assessment on pages 6-10 before presenting the activities. The assessment is arranged hierarchically by difficulty, as are the tasks in No-Glamour Inferences. Use clinical judgment to determine which assessment items are age-appropriate for your student and where to begin instruction.

Throughout this book, students are encouraged to draw conclusions and to explain how they came to their conclusions. This makes the implicit process of making inferences more explicit, an effective learning strategy. Use No-Glamour Inferences to teach students how to problem solve and recognize that solutions can be found, even when information is missing. The tasks in this book require students to identify and supply missing information, as well as predict and analyze outcomes. They will identify missing parts of objects, animals, or sequential events and processes. The particular types of inferences in this book include: object, agent, location, feelings, and cause and effect. More difficult tasks in this book target inferences in figurative language and short stories.

At the end of the book, you will find an answer key with suggested answers to the items on the activity pages. Student responses, however, will vary and it is up to you to determine the appropriateness of any particular response. There may be several acceptable responses for any given item, so encourage students to discuss why they gave a particular answer.

The activities in this book can be done one-on-one with a student or as group activities. Also use this book to help students:

- Enhance oral reasoning skills.
- Analyze, interpret, understand, and express feelings and behaviors.
- Expand utterances in conversation.
- Increase vocabulary.
- Develop creative responses to interpretive questions.

I hope this book helps you teach inference skills in a way that is satisfying to you and enjoyable for your students.

2. Point to the picture at the bottom of the page that shows what happened between the first and last picture.
3. Look at the picture and answer the questions.

a. Why does the painting have a ribbon on it?

b. Who painted the picture?

c. How do you think the girl feels?

d. Who is the man in the picture?
For items 4-10, read the clue(s) to the student and then ask the question.

4. I am a coin.
   I am silver.
   I am worth five cents.
   What am I?

5. Marcia held the stop sign and helped the school children walk across the street.
   What is Marcia's job?

6. The ride was long and boring, so Greg and his family played license-plate bingo.
   Where were Greg and his family?

7. Samantha looked out into the crowd. Her hands, legs, and voice trembled as she began her speech. How did Samantha feel?

8. Tyrone got into his pajamas, brushed his teeth, and set his alarm clock. Then he turned out the light. What did Tyrone do next?

9. The neighborhood children dressed in costumes and went trick-or-treating. Why?

10. Tanya has a cold. How would you know?

11. Read the sentence. Circle the answer that means the same as the underlined part.

I didn’t have much time before practice, so I decided to take a cat nap.

a. short nap
b. long nap
c. sudden nap

12. Read the story and answer the questions.

Sammy couldn’t make a decision at the store. He wanted a dog, but his mom said that dogs are too much work. Sammy didn’t like hamsters and he already had a fish that he had won at the carnival. “Okay, I’ve made my decision,” Sammy told his mom. “I want that little orange one that’s licking his paw. Now all we need is a litter box and some toys. I can’t wait to tell all of my friends!”

a. Where did this story take place?
b. What kind of pet did Sammy decide to get?
c. How did Sammy feel about his new pet?
d. Why would it take more work to care for a dog than a fish?

Beth was proud of her garden. She planted seeds and bulbs in the spring. She felt happy as each tulip bloomed. She loved to watch the beautiful colors fill her yard. She pulled the weeds so her flowers would have more space to grow. Beth watered the plants every day, just as the man at the nursery had told her.

One day, Beth’s friend invited her to go on vacation. Beth happily agreed. They left on Thursday and returned the following Wednesday. When Beth got home, she couldn’t believe what happened to her flowers.

a. What happened to Beth’s flowers?

_______________________________________________________________________

b. How did the flowers get that way?

_______________________________________________________________________

c. How do you think Beth felt when she saw her garden?

_______________________________________________________________________

d. What will Beth do about her garden?

Mrs. James went to the store and bought everything to make a surprise for her son’s birthday. When she got home, she took out her book and read the directions. Mrs. James set the ingredients on the counter and combined them to make the batter. She filled a large pan with the batter and put it in the oven.

When the timer went off, Mrs. James took the surprise out of the oven and put it on the counter to cool. When the surprise was cool, she took something from the refrigerator and carefully used a knife to spread it all over the surprise. Finally, she opened a box and counted out seven small objects. Mrs. James put them on the surprise and looked for some matches.

a. What kind of book did Mrs. James read?
